The purposes of World Listening Day are to:

- Celebrate the listening practices of the world and the ecology of its acoustic environments;
- Raise awareness about the growing number of individual and group efforts that creatively explore the Acoustic Ecology based on the pioneering efforts of the World Soundscape Project, World Forum for Acoustic Ecology, and others;
- Design and implement educational initiatives that explore these concepts and practices.

Our theme for the 5th annual World Listening Day (2014) is “Listen To You!”
Some thoughts and questions to consider are:

- How do you make yourself heard by others?
- How do you listen and what do you hear when you want to be unseen?
- How might the sounds you produce adapt to your nearby environment?
- What might a “listening ethic” be?
- How might such an ethic apply particularly to understanding the relationship between humans and other living creatures?

What would you like to do on World Listening Day 2014? Events could happen on Wednesday, July 18th. However, if another day during that week (July 14-20) would work better with your schedule that would be fine. Please fill out this form and return it to worldlistening@gmail.com, with “World Listening Day” in the subject line.

Also, please feel free to forward this form to other individuals and organizations that you think might be interested in learning about World Listening Day. Thanks for your help!

How did you find out about World Listening Day?

Did you participate in World Listening Day in a previous year? If so, in what year and what did you do?

What are your plans for the 2014 World Listening Day?

If you have plans to participate in a public event, do you have the names of any other participants?

Do you have any plans to publicize your plans (through newspapers, websites, blogs, etc.)?

Are there other individuals and/or organizations that you would like to contact and invite them to participate in World Listening Day? If so, would you like to share those names?
